Baseball

4. Correct the following statements.

- a. If you play defense, you don't have to be a good runner.

As the team takes turns, and every player plays both as a batter and as a fielder, you should be a good runner in any case.

- b. The pitcher has to throw the ball at the runner.

The pitcher throws the ball to the batter in order for him to hit the ball.

- c. The team gets a point when the runner reaches the first base.

The team gets a point as soon as the batter has run around all the bases and has reached home plate before the team is out.

- d. A baseball game lasts for 60 minutes.

Baseball does not use a clock. The game is over after nine innings, no matter how long that takes.

- e. Sign language is not allowed in baseball.

Signs about how to play that are exchanged between managers and catchers are an important and interesting part of baseball.

Transkript

This podcast is brought to you by esl-library.com. Today's podcast features a reading from our 'Famous things' section.

Baseball. Baseball is a popular team sport that evolved from several bat-and-ball games in Europe. It is played on a baseball diamond with two teams. Nine players from a roster of about 25 play on each side at one time. The teams take turns playing offense and defense. To become a skilled baseball player, athletes must learn to throw, catch and hit a baseball. It also helps to be a strong runner. Basic equipment includes a ball, a bat, gloves and bases. The two main opponents in baseball are the pitcher and the batter. The pitcher (defense) throws the ball from a pitching mound. The batter (offense) hits the ball from home plate. After a batter hits the ball, he or she has to run around the bases without getting tagged by a fielder or a catcher on the other team. Runners get a point for their team, if they make it back to home plate before the team is out. Unlike many other team sports, baseball does not use a clock. Each game has nine innings. An offensive team gets three outs in each inning before switching to the position of defense. Baseball is a game of skill and strategy. Professional pitchers study batters closely and adjust their pitching style to strike them out. Strategic runners steal bases to get home faster. The manager also relies on strategy to help his team win. Players watch managers and catchers closely for signs about how to make each play. Baseball is known as America's pastime, but it is also popular in Canada, Mexico, Cuba and Japan. [...]
